Who are you yielded to?

Ron Coale

Hebrews 1:9 Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

It is too bad that our country is so divided after the election. It need not be this way, but since the inception of our Republic, it has always been this way. There is no getting around it. Our form of government gives everyone the equal right to have, and voice their own opinions. This is one of the blessings of our country—that we are not all going to think the same way.

Even though our name says, “the UNITED States,” we don’t all hold the same united beliefs, or even moral values. Speaking as a Christian, we should, but we don’t.

It is the same way in our churches. Members of a church don’t all hold the same opinions. They differ somewhat. Some of it is because some have not grown in their study of the Bible as others have. Some is because of background. Still some is because of the situational time period in which they find themselves. However, one thing binds us together in love, and that is Jesus Christ.

The Christian can love another Christian because they love God first. When you love God, you love the things about Him, including His Creation. Therefore, I can say, that loving others is like loving God because it is loving the things of God—His created image.

If Jim loves God, and Julia loves God, then it is easy for them to love each other. This relationship is modeled on the trinity.

If all three sides are united, then the whole is a triangle. But if one element is missing, then the whole triangle falls apart, or rather should I say, the whole relationship of God love breaks down.

ryone seems to be focused on the word HATE? Even good Christians will say things like, “I’m tired of all of the hate.” God knows all about being hated (John 15:18-25). The truth of the matter is that all hate is ultimately directed towards Jesus and His uncovering of evil (John 7:7). There can be no stopping the dialogue of HATE. It needs to be diluted with a dialogue of love. The kind of love that adds people to the “love relationship” (see illustration above) of Christ. Bottom line—if there were more acts of true love (bringing people into the triangle) and less complaining about HATE, then hate would be so diluted that it would become ineffective.

The more we talk about HATE, the more people hear about HATE. Inversely, the less we talk about HATE, the less people hear about it. Likewise, the more we talk about LOVE, the more people hear about LOVE.

So, Hate is always going to be with us. Lets not give it free advertising by talking about it so much. Rather, lets talk about love. Lets love people by leading them to God and teaching them to love Him. Then the triangle will be complete. How do you show your hate for iniquity? By showing your love for righteousness.~
